

The Water Resources Congress and its predecessor, the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, have, for over half a century, dedicated their efforts to assuring wise development of our water and related land resources. The Water Resources Congress will continue to provide and encourage organized support at local, State, and Federal levels, for comprehensive water resources programs and projects designed to satisfy the full range of our present and future water needs.

In the past, the N.C. Water Resources Congress's efforts have been largely at the Federal level. The emphasis is now changing to the N.C. General Assembly. We must have more support from the state level as the Federal agencies look for more and more local funding.

The membership of the North Carolina Water Resources Congress includes members of the North Carolina Congressional Delegation, members of the North Carolina General Assembly, State and local Government officials, civic leaders, and leaders in industry, business, and education.
